NHL FIRST-HALF WINNERS AND LOSERS

Panthers on upswing

Mike Brehm
USA TODAY

The early part of the 2021 NHL season was dominated by COVID-19 news. Thirty-five games were postponed, and 59 players were on the COVID-19 protocol list on Feb. 12.

But things have turned around, with not recent COVID-related postponements and the protocol list in the single digits. Fans are returning in limited numbers to many U.S. arenas.

That has allowed the focus to be back on the ice. Who are the winners and losers of the first half of the season?

Winner: Vegas Golden Knights goalie Marc-Andre Fleury

The Golden Knights held on to both of their high-priced goalies, and Fleury outplayed 2020 acquisition Robin Lehner early. He took off when Lehner was hurt. Fleury is in the running for the Vezina Trophy with a 1.77 goals-against average and .934 save percentage.

Loser: Philadelphia Flyers goalie Carter Hart

He was in the Vezina Trophy equation entering this season, but his struggles (3.62, .884) have been puzzling. He was lit up by the Boston Bruins at Lake Tahoe. He was pulled in another game after giving up three goals on eight shots. He made two big saves late in the Flyers' 5-4 overtime win against the New York Rangers on Monday. "I definitely feel better, but I still have a lot of areas I need to keep working at," he said.

Winner: Florida Panthers

They had the pieces with three-time Stanley Cup-winning coach Joel Quenneville, two-time Vezina Trophy-winning goalie Sergei Bobrovsky, star forwards Aleksander Barkov and Jonathan Huberdeau and defenseman Aaron Ekblad. They just needed time to jell. Newcomer Patrick Hornqvist has provided gritty scrappiness and Carter Verhaeghe was a good pickup.

Loser: Buffalo Sabres

A mess that can't be explained solely by their COVID-19 pause. A team with Jack Eichel, Taylor Hall, Jeff Skinner and Eric Staal should be scoring more than a league-worst 2.07 goals per game. Those four, who combined for 85 goals in 2019-20, have totaled eight, three fewer than leading scorer Sam Reinhart. And now Eichel is out for "the foreseeable future." The result is an 11-game losing streak, a league-worst 6-17-4 record and a frustrated general manager Kevin Adams.

Winner: New York Islanders

Coach Barry Trotz recently passed 1,700 career games, which speaks to his long-term success. The Islanders have followed up a berth in the Eastern Conference final with a nine-game winning streak to the top of the East Division. Trotz has the team playing crisp defense that has helped Semenov Varlamov and Ilya Sorokin combine for five shutouts. The offense took a while to get on track but has taken off, including a goal of the year candidate by Mathew Barzal.

Loser: Washington Capitals' Tom Wilson

Wilson lost more than $30,000 in pay when he was suspended for seven games for a hit that sent Bruins defenseman Brandon Carlo to an overnight stay in the hospital. He had reformed his game the past two years, but now he'll have to watch the level of his physical play because any further suspension in the next 18 months will carry a higher per-game cost.

Winner: NHL broadcast deal

The NHL worked out a seven-year deal in which four of the next seven Stanley Cup Finals will air on ABC, and ESPN will become the primary cable and streaming partner. That will give extra exposure to hockey, important with NBCSN going away. The league will later announce a second U.S. broadcasting partner.

Loser: Dallas Stars

Their grade would be an incomplete. It's tough enough for a Stanley Cup runner-up to do well the following season. But the Stars have had bad luck, too. Their first four games were postponed by COVID-19 and four were moved back because of power outages in Texas. They have plenty of games in hand, but they will need a strong run to make the playoffs.

Winner: Minnesota Wild rookie Kirill Kaprizov

The Kontinental Hockey League player showed he was worth the wait when he scored three points in his NHL debut, including an overtime goal after a steal. His speed, anticipation, moves and shot have made the Wild fun to watch. The Calder Trophy is his to lose.

Loser: New York Rangers rookie Alexis Lafrenière

The No. 1 overall pick was expected to have more than four goals and seven points after 27 games. But dominance in the juniors doesn't always translate to immediate NHL success. This year's top rookie scorers, Kaprizov, 23, and Ottawa Senators forward Tim Stützle, 19, played against older players overseas before joining the NHL.
