Public Notices

Public Notices

Public Notices are a permanent and independent record of government and court actions. These include state and local government meetings, rule making, available contracts, zoning changes, and many more, as required by law. In addition, parties to some court proceedings, such as foreclosures, probate, and estate actions are required to publish notices to ensure notification of affected parties, as well as the general public. These notices also alert business owners, large and small, to potential government contractual jobs, helping to ensure economic activity across a level playing field. Public notices have existed to ensure transparency in all levels of government since the founding of the United States.

State and local notices are published in Maine newspapers and are also recorded at mainenotices.com, where anyone can browse or search notices, and sign up to receive email alerts when relevant notices appear.

Public Notices

Kennebec Savings Bank, Augusta, Maine, has applied to the Superintendent pursuant to Title 9-B M.R.S. Chapters 35 and 105, to acquire by merger Kennebec Federal Savings and Loan Association, Waterville, Maine. To facilitate the merger, Kennebec Federal Savings and Loan Association proposes to first convert to a state-chartered mutual financial institution pursuant to Title 9-B M.R.S. Chapter 34. An application for conversion to state charter was simultaneously submitted by Kennebec Federal Savings and Loan Association.

The public is invited to submit written comments on either or both applications to the Bureau of Financial Institutions, 36 State House Station, Augusta, Maine 04333-0036 or electronically through the Bureau of Financial Institutions' website at <http://www.maine.gov/pfr/financialinstitutions/index.shtml>. Comments should indicate the ap-

NOTICE OF STATE RULEMAKING

August 19, 2020

As Posted in 5 daily Maine Newspapers
 Public Input for Proposed Rules

Notices are published each Wednesday to alert the public regarding state agency rule-making. You may obtain a copy of any rule by notifying the agency contact person. You may also comment on the rule, and/or attend the public hearing. If no hearing is scheduled, you may request one - the agency may then schedule a hearing, and must do so if 5 or more persons request it. If you are disabled or need special services to attend a hearing, please notify the agency contact person at least 7 days prior to it. Petitions: you can petition an agency to adopt, amend, or repeal any rule; the agency must provide you with petition forms, and must respond to your petition within 60 days. The agency must enter rule-making if the petition is signed by 150 or more registered voters, and may begin rule-making if there are fewer. You can also petition the Legislature to review a rule; the Executive Director of the Legislative Council (115 State House Station, Augusta, ME 04333, phone (207) 287-1615) will provide you with the necessary petition forms. The appropriate legislative committee will review a rule upon receipt of a petition from 100 or more registered voters, or from "...any person who may be directly, substantially and adversely affected by the application of a rule..." (Title 5 §11112). World-Wide Web: Copies of the weekly notices and the full texts of adopted rule chapters may be found on the internet at: <http://www.maine.gov/sos/cec/rules>. There is also a list of rule-making liaisons (<http://www.maine.gov/sos/cec/rules/liaisons.html>), who are single points of contact for each agency.

COVID-19 shaming won't help football

Dan Wolken
Columnist
USA TODAY

We have reached the inevitable point of the pandemic where photographs of college kids returning to campus and acting like college kids are being treated on social media as if each sorority party or bar gathering is chipping away at the viability of the football season.

Football players at a variety of Southeastern Conference schools have tweeted pictures of their fellow students along with expressions like SMH (that's Shaking My Head for us olds). Mississippi coach Lane Kiffin said Monday all the evidence you needed to understand how difficult it would be for players to avoid COVID-19 would be a drive through downtown Oxford. Nick Saban even made an appeal to the "moral integrity" of Alabama students to wear masks and maintain social distancing.

One question, though, about all these attempts to shame college kids into behaving responsibly so that a college football season has a better chance of happening: Have any of them actually met college kids?

Hellooooo. These are people who, for better or worse, cannot be shamed into anything. Just take a look at their Instagram feeds. Or their dorm rooms. Or their blood alcohol levels.

Nothing against college students, by the way. One day they'll grow up and discover their responsibility gene. After all, they're our future CEOs and politicians. Well, let's try that again. One day, they'll grow up and discover their responsibility gene. After all, they're our future teachers and community advocates and journalists, and one day they'll look back on their college years with a mix of amazement and regret about how many Natty Lights they could drink and still get up the next morning for an 8 o'clock class.

There has to be a better way of ensuring scenes like this than shaming college students over their pandemic behavior. DALE ZANINE/USA TODAY SPORTS

The fundamental problem with asking college kids to act responsibly enough to avoid outbreaks on campus and thus help the football team carry on with a season is that, by and large, the students don't care about sports nearly as much as we do.

That's why it was both unsurprising and somewhat amusing when Alabama athletic director Greg Byrne tweeted a picture of a large gathering of unmasked students on Sunday with the following comment: "Who wants college sports this fall?? Obviously not these people!! We've got to do better than this for each other and our campus community. Please wear your masks!"

True to form, the comments tilted toward the predictable: "They will be fine!" "They're just living their life!" or, a classic in the genre, "But my liberty!"

If you were someone like Byrne or Saban, you'd be frustrated to see those pictures too. The amount of time and energy people who work closely with football programs have invested during the pandemic to reimagine facilities and processes to just have a faint shot at a season is indescribable. And to potentially see it all undone because thousands of students have so little self-discipline that they can't even go a week without giving COVID-19 to each other in large numbers has to be absolutely maddening.

But it's hard to imagine that the answer is shaming them or even threatening to take their football away.

After all, even at places where they take football pretty seriously, the games are completely intertwined with the social currency it provides.

That's not to suggest students don't have an interest in sports or whether the football team is winning. But what's college football to college kids without the ability or the freedom to party?

It's a battle college football, and colleges in general, are not going to win.

North Carolina gave up on in-person classes after a week, though the school said in a release it still plans to play football this fall. Notre Dame, a relatively sequestered campus environment, has gone from four positive tests on Aug. 10 to 13 last Friday to 80 on Monday.

These are undeniably bad developments for football, though it's not unexpected. We all knew that once college started, college things would happen.

As nervous administrators watch social media feeds for pictures of irresponsible gatherings right on their campuses, they better figure out how to either live with that problem or get around it. Because if shaming college students for being college students is your only play, you might as well forfeit the game.

Don't get sucked into outrage over Tatis grand slam

Gabe Lacques
USA TODAY

In the eighth inning of a game his San Diego Padres led by seven runs over the Texas Rangers, Fernando Tatis Jr., reveling in the spoils of a 3-and-0 count, swung and hammered his second home run of the game, a grand slam that turned a rout into a runaway.

That's fine.

Afterward, Rangers manager Chris Woodward expressed dismay over Tatis swinging in such a count in such a situation, one that barely registers on baseball's spectrum that's roughly the equivalent of not blitzing the other quarterback when you're up six touchdowns.

"Just because I don't like it," the second-year manager said of Tatis' swing, "doesn't mean it's not right."

That's also fine.

We're all for marveling at greatness, and Tatis exudes it every time he steps on a baseball diamond. It's true: Tatis swinging at that pitch rather than accepting a 3-and-1 count brought more joy to the world, or at least to the scattered few actually tuned into the late innings of a Padres-Rangers blowout on a Monday evening in the middle of a global pandemic.

It would behoove Woodward to lighten up a little bit, sure.

Yet while keeping the masses entertained is what funds his paycheck, his more specific job is managing the Texas Rangers. In an era when the front office increasingly calls the shots, defending your players is perhaps a bigger part of a manager's responsibility than ever.

Sure, Woodward could've scored some Tough Guy Points by tossing his pitcher under the bus and joining the chorus to suggest his guy make better pitches rather than expect a courtesy take from the opposition. But Woodward, now suspended along with pitcher Ian Gibaut, must manage the Rangers not just Monday, but also Tuesday night and the day after and the month after that. If he wants to manage them much longer than two seasons, an almost blind devotion to players is necessary.

That brings us to Padres manager Jayce Tingler, whose offseason hiring furrowed more than a few brows, given his paucity of managerial experience — nothing beyond the Dominican or Arizona summer leagues, save for a 10-game winter ball stint.

After the Padres' 14-4 conquest, Tingler seemed more concerned with pleasing Woodward and the baseball establishment than backing his player, revealing Tatis missed a sign to take a pitch, that the Padres "aren't trying to run up the score" and that Tatis should "probably see a strike right there."

A key prerequisite for any manager is the willingness and ability to lie on behalf of your players, be it about an injury

Fernando Tatis Jr. leads the NL with 11 homers and 28 RBI through Monday.

JEROME MIRON/USA TODAY SPORTS

or an on-field gaffe or a communication breakdown. That applies perhaps double for your superstars, assuming they are acting in good faith and producing.

"We had a conversation about it" usually suffices.

Instead, Tingler thought it better to let the world know that not only did he think Tatis' swing was unsporting, but, by golly, he missed a sign, too.

Little wonder, then, that the Industrial Take Complex was waiting for him online.

Yet even the most strident "Let The Kids Play" take-ologist would have to admit that there is a line, somewhere. Certainly, Tatis didn't come near it in slugging his major league-leading 11th home run that ensured not only victory but a night off for the Padres' high-leverage relievers.

So how about this: Bottom of the eighth, up 15-1, bases loaded, a trembling rookie unable to find the strike zone. OK to swing from your heels on 3-0, there?

If your answer is yes, OK. Yet also know that reasonable people may see it differently, and perhaps even have a moral leg to stand on.

Further, for those suggesting, "This is why nobody likes the MLB and why the NBA is so great!" consider that unwritten rules are everywhere. If a team is in dribble-out mode over the final 24 seconds of an NBA game, would the opposition receive it well if they turned tail and tossed an alley-oop over a bewildered defender?

Baseball is trudging out of its dark ages and into, well, something we're not quite sure of yet. The game is better than ever or maybe worse than it's ever been or strangely, perhaps, both of the above. Monday's tete-a-tatis in Texas was a reminder that ambiguity will never die in a game where almost everything is quantifiable, to the delight of some and the disgust of others.

Tatis is fine. Woodward is fine.

Baseball is fine.

This is fine.
