Five teams you'll likely hear from in March

Eddie Timanus and Erick Smith
USA TODAY

Like all clichés, there's more than an element of truth in the coaching adage that it isn't important where you start but where you finish. It's especially applicable to preseason polls, which are based strictly on potential. Once again, we'll try to identify a few teams that didn't crack the USA TODAY Sports preseason college men's basketball top 25 but could end up there when trophies are awarded and the nets are cut down.

● Texas Tech: In a league where five teams occupy the top nine spots in the preseason poll, there are going to be ups and downs during conference play. But the journey in the Big 12 should help get the Red Raiders battle-tested when the time comes to make a tournament run. The foundation of their success under Grant McCasland and predecessors Mark Adams and Chris Beard was defense. That won't change. But there will be enough scoring to win games with holdover Darrion Williams getting help from transfers JT Toppin (New Mexico) and Elijah Hawkins (Minnesota).

● Rutgers: The Scarlet Knights weren't totally snubbed, as they appeared on enough ballots to finish second among others receiving votes. The hype for Rutgers is based largely on the arrival of a pair of top-five recruits. One is Dylan Harper, brother of former Knights standout Ron Harper Jr., who has the genes to step in immediately to run the point. The other is Ace Bailey, an athletic swingman ranked second only to Duke commit Cooper Flagg by many recruiting outlets. Those two along with Jeremiah Williams, who averaged 12.2 points despite missing a huge chunk of last season due to injury, could make some noise in a Big Ten that is more wide open this year.

● Xavier: It's easy to overlook the Musketeers if you look at last season's 16-18 record. But the team was hit by an injury crisis and limped its way to the finish. Should the group stay healthy, it has the talent to make a run at finishing second behind Connecticut in the league. It starts with the return of big man Zach Freemantle, who has missed the better part of two seasons. He provides a presence in the middle and has support on the perimeter from returning starter Dayvion McKnight. Sean Miller brought in a host of transfers to make the team deeper, including Ryan Conwell (Indiana State), Dante Maddox (Toledo) and Marcus Foster (Furman).

● Wake Forest: Every ACC team not named Duke or North Carolina could have appeared on the snub list. We will concede some skepticism is warranted for the Demon Deacons, who have not been dancing since 2017. But the pieces might be in place to end the drought under fifth-year coach Steve Forbes. The optimism starts with Hunter Sallis (18-0 points per game), who went through the NBA draft evaluation process but decided to return. Also returning are backcourt mate Cam Hildreth (13.8 points), who played with a broken wrist for much of last season, and center Efton Reid III (9.6 points, 7.9 rebounds).

● Boise State: The Mountain West advanced six teams into the tournament and had two teams ranked on Selection Sunday. There are none in this year's preseason poll. The Broncos were voted the favorites to win the league with Tyson Degenhart and O'Mar Stanley as the two major reasons. Degenhart (16.7 points, 6.2 rebounds) is the conference's preseason player of the year and is joined on the first team by Stanley and San Jose State transfer Alvaro Cardenas. Another addition from the portal who could provide scoring punch is Javan Buchanan, who played for NAIA school Indiana Wesleyan.

Duke freshman phenom embarks on season

Jeff Zillgitt
USA TODAY

The game has changed for elite college athletes.

Duke freshman Cooper Flagg was prepared to take advantage.

The projected No. 1 pick in the 2025 NBA draft, Flagg has reached an NIL (name, image and likeness) deal with Gatorade, it was announced last week, making him the first college men's basketball player to join the performance and wellness sports drink company.

"For me it was a huge opportunity coming from a family that drank Gatorade pretty much my whole life," the versatile 6-foot-9 guard-forward said.

This announcement follows Flagg's decision to sign an athletic apparel deal with New Balance, which has deep roots and manufacturing plants in Flagg's home state of Maine.

Flagg arrived in Durham, North Carolina, as the most celebrated freshman since Zion Williamson. He was the national high school player of the year (including the Gatorade player of the year) following a senior season at Montverde (Florida) Academy in which he averaged 16.5 points, 7.5 rebounds, 3.8 assists, 2.7 blocks and 1.6 steals and shot 55.1% from the field.

Duke is the favorite to win the ACC, and Flagg, who doesn't turn 18 until Dec. 21, is a major reason why in addition to a roster that features at least two other projected first-rounders, freshmen Khaman Maluach and Kon Knueppel, and projected NBA players, senior Tyrese Proctor and freshman Isaiah Evans.

The Blue Devils open the season against Maine on Monday (7 ET, ACC Network) at Cameron Indoor Stadium.

"There's a huge adjustment as far as the level of basketball goes," Flagg said. "And obviously speaking for any freshman in the country playing basketball, there's a lot of ups and downs that come with it. It's a new environment, new scenarios, new players. The physicality is just at a different level.

"So just kind of taking it day by day, having some older guys give me advice, to take me under their wing has been really big for me. And just coming through some of the down days and trying to just keep looking forward, keep my head up, and just trying to keep get better."

Flagg is doing his best to remain in the present as attention surrounds him and the Blue Devils.

"We have a really competitive team and so we're pushing each other every single day, so helping each other get better is something that's going to happen. For me, the biggest thing is just trying to focus and stay grounded and stay connected with all my teammates and just let everything else figure yourself out."
