ON THE VERGE TINASHE SPOTLIGHT ON BREAKTHROUGH ARTISTS Her '2 On' anthem is one hot number

Patrick Ryan @PatRyanWrites USA TODAY

NAME GAME: Memorizing the words to Tinashe's late song-ofsummer entry, 2 On, is easy. But saying her name correctly? That's another feat entirely. "I've gotten a lot of 'Tina-shee," 'Tina-shay' and 'Tanisha,' " she says. (It's pronounced "Tee-nahshay.") The name is common where her father is from in Zimbabwe. "The worst I ever got was 'Tarnish.' What? How'd they even come up with that?"

TRIPLE-THREAT TALENT: Tinashe Kachingwe got her start modeling and acting as a toddler, working as a motion-capture model for Tom Hanks' The Polar Express in fourth grade and playing a recurring role on CBS' Two and a Half Men as a teen. After forming The Stunners in 2007 and opening for Justin Bieber in 2010, the girl group disbanded. Tinashe branched out solo, charting her first hit with 2 On, which topped USA TODAY's rhythmic airplay charts for four weeks.

READY TO PARTY: The inspiration was simple for the sultry "turn up" anthem, which features a verse by Schoolboy Q and production by DJ Mustard. Having just turned 21, she wanted to make "a song that I can hear in the club, something that pumps me up and makes me want to dance." 2 On has since been remixed by Drake, who performed it with Tinashe at his OVO Fest in Toronto.

AGE OF 'AQUARIUS': Expect more flirty coos and alluring beats on her debut album, Aquarius, out Oct. 7 on RCA Records and named in part for her horoscope sign. Influenced by Michael and Janet Jackson growing up, as well as newer artists James Blake and Sbtrkt, "my music is definitely rooted in a place of R&B, but it has a lot of influence from hip-hop, alternative, electronic," Tinashe says. "I don't like to be stuck in the 'R&B box.'

FAMILY FIRST: Tinashe still lives with her parents. Her next big investment? "I'd like to buy a house for my family. They've been invested in me for years and years, and I feel I owe them."

MANY TALENTS: Aside from holding a black belt in tae kwon do, she also loves to paint. "Nature feels religious and very spiritual for me, so I paint landscapes, oceans, trees and abstract art. I don't really like to paint people."

SAMSUNG'S NEW NOTE 4 HAS AN EDGE ... LITERALLY

Curved display on side of screen lets you multitask

Edward C. Baig @edbaig ebaig@usatoday.com USA TODAY

FIRST LOOK

NEW YORK Samsung is relentless when it comes to introducing new products. At the IFA international trade show in Berlin, Samsung expanded its Galaxy Note "phablet" series with new Note 4 and Note Edge models. Samsung also teamed with Oculus on a Gear VR virtual-reality headset that relies on the Note 4. Here are my takeaways after a hands-on first look at a press briefing in Manhattan.

Samsung hopes the 5.7-inch Galaxy Note 4 that is coming next month will help it continue to dominate the large-screen phablet category it pioneered. According to Samsung, phablet users spend more time on their devices than smartphone or tablet customers do, and are more satisfied and loyal.

To keep it that way, the Note 4 incorporates several improvements. The camera has been beefed up. The rear-facing 16megapixel camera gains optical image stabilization to reduce the shakes when capturing vou're video. Samsung says the camera can also extend the exposure time when you're shooting in a dim environment.

The front 3.7megapixel camera has a wider angle designed to improve group "selfies." Samsung adds a rapid batterycharging feature that it says will let you go from a zero charge to 50% in just 30 minutes.

The Quad-HD (2560 x 1440) Super AMOLED display on Note 4 is a looker. The latest design incorporates a new metal frame that complements the removable soft-textured back cover (so you can replace the battery).

As with its previous phablets, the latest Note employs a soupedup stylus called the S Pen, slightly refined this time around, that you can use for notes, handwriting and mouse-like functions.

A CUTTING-EDGE VERSION

One of the advantages of a phablet is the extra screen real estate that lets you multitask by keeping several apps open simultaneouslv. With the Note 4, you have more flexibility on how to move around and resize windows of open apps

While the Note 4 makes some incremental advancements over predecessors, the new premium icons for the apps you summon most often – just tap one of these icons and it takes over the main Note Edge display. Or you might display sports scores or stock quotes along the edge. The edge can also be used for notifications. You can even display the clock on the edge while laying the device, say, flat next to your bed, while the main screen is otherwise dark.

HOW THE EDGE HELPS

If you open certain apps, the edge provides icons and controls in context. For example, all of your camera controls are on the edge when you're taking a picture. Music playback controls reside there when you're listening to tunes.

You can even display a ruler on the edge. Samsung says that the icons and notifications along the edge are not meant to distract from the main screen you are watching.

Perhaps more than any other high-profile tech company, Samsung has sometimes brought out features that have bordered on being gimmicky. But the edge display here is unquestionably cool, and potentially useful, too, especially with Samsung opening

During my hands-on demo, I got to see how you can easily swipe from edge screen to edge screen. But I want to try Note Edge in the "real world" to see if there are times when the placement of these edge icons causes me to inadvertently launch an app that I didn't intend to open. Samsung reps claim that will not occur, and it didn't happen during my demo time.

GEARING UP TO GO VIRTUAL

Ever since Facebook bought Oculus in March, there's been fresh attention focused on virtual reality. Now Samsung is teaming with Oculus on a head-mounted contraption called Gear VR Innovator Edition. You snap in the Note 4 via USB inside a concealed compartment – alas, Gear VR doesn't work with other Samsung devices – and place the supersize goggles over your head. You're now immersed in a three-dimensional, 360-degree virtual-reality world that, as the cliché goes, puts you in the best seat in the house. You can look up, down and all around.

I got to watch and listen to a Coldplay concert, pretend I was intruding upon Tony Stark's lab inside an Avengers video game, and take in a bird's-eye virtual tour over New York City.

Though Gear VR has its own touch pad, back button, volume key, accelerometer, compass and gyroscope, it relies on the Note 4 for power, sound (you can wear earbuds or use Bluetooth speakers) and content. The VR hardware is rendered useless without the phablet. Samsung says you'll typically have enough juice on the Note 4 to last through a fulllength movie.

When you snap the Note 4 into Gear VR, a VR store where you can grab stuff to watch is launched. Samsung says you'll be able to access virtual-reality content from IMAX, DreamWorks AR, Cirque du Soleil Media, M-Go, Vevo and others.

While the demo was quite compelling and Gear VR comfortable enough to wear, I never could get the screen totally sharp (despite a focus dial), and even got a little nauseated.

But this was not a final device so I'll reserve judgment, and I'm definitely eager to spend more time trying it out when it arrives in the fall.
