FOOTBALL FOUR

Unbeaten battles will provide clarity

George Schroeder
USA TODAY

Yeah, we all mostly looked at the first weekend of November as a diversion to get us to next weekend – when we'll get two matchups of unbeatens, including LSU at Alabama and all of the takes about how the Southeastern Conference West Division showdown could be a Football Four accelerant ... for both teams. Hold that thought. No really, hold it, because it remains unlikely – at least in part because of some potentially important developments in Week 10.

Out West, the Pac-12 (Remember it? Left for dead after Week 1?) had a very good weekend and remains very much alive.

Utah won at Washington – oh, how the Huskies have fallen – and then Oregon blew out Southern California, a dominant performance and stunning scene at the Coliseum. The result might have sealed Clay Helton's fate. It also put Utah in control of the Pac-12 South Division. And the combination means we might be headed for a Pac-12 championship matchup of Top 10 teams. The winner could slide right into the Football Four.

Not this week, though. Not yet. Meanwhile, it had been an odd and tumultuous few weeks for Georgia: a horrible loss to South Carolina. A slog past Kentucky in the rain. A bunch of concern about the offense. Underlying everything, significant worry that this season, which was supposed to be the season when everything came together, might instead unravel.

A 24-17 win against rival Florida did not answer all of the questions or guarantee Georgia will meet its lofty expectations. It's still uncertain whether the Bulldogs have the firepower to beat, say, Alabama or LSU in an SEC championship matchup.

But it was certainly cathartic. Jake Fromm was good. His receivers were legitimately dangerous. The Bulldogs were just better than Florida. What that means, who knows? But Georgia remains on track for at least a shot at reaching the Football Four.

As always, remember we pick the bracket as if the season was over today.* (Now, let's move on to those matchups of unbeatens this week in Tuscaloosa and, uh, Minneapolis!)

Football Four

1. Ohio State – Took Saturday off, which is nice. And the next couple of weeks – Maryland! At Rutgers! – don't look too much more challenging than "Bye" was. Not until Nov. 23 does Penn State come to Columbus, and after that there's a little trip to Ann Arbor.

2. LSU – Took it easy Saturday, which is good because it won't be easy in Tuscaloosa next Saturday. The Tigers have the best resume, but this will easily be their biggest test.

3. Alabama – Took it easy Saturday, which is good because it won't be easy at home next Saturday. The Tide have played, well, nobody – they've had the softest schedule of any of the contenders. That changes with LSU.

4. Clemson – The continued conflation of that September escape against North Carolina with all of those other games in which the Tigers have been routinely dominant is a weird, weird thing. Clemson has been very, very good. (That said, Clemson should not play football against Wofford. Clemson should hang with Wofford at a cookout over at Dabo's house.)

Four More

5. Penn State – The Nittany Lions were off. This week, a visit to Minneapolis for a battle of unbeatens. Even as the undercard, it should be fun. We'll find out if the Gophers are for real, and Penn State could vault into legitimate Football Four contention.

6. Oregon – In recent years when the Ducks have forged special seasons, those have included important wins against USC. How does 56-24 at the Coliseum fit? Yeah, the Trojans are melting down, but Oregon had plenty to do with it. If the Ducks keep winning, they'll be positioned for the Football Four bracket.

7. Georgia – A grinder of a game, which is the kind Kirby Smart likes, as the Bulldogs knocked rival Florida out of the Football Four race while staying in it themselves. Oh, and the coach wants us to know Jake Fromm can pass, which wasn't in doubt. Georgia's offensive philosophy? That remains in doubt. But not Fromm's passing ability.

8. Utah – The Utes went to Seattle and ground out a fourth-quarter comeback win against Washington. Then Oregon dropped USC, putting Utah in control of the Pac-12 South. Could we be headed for a Pac-12 championship game that's a de facto Playoff quarterfinal? Maybe.

The season is not over today.
Don't be worried that your team sits just outside the cut. This is a weekly snapshot. And what do we know, anyway?*

WEEK 10 OBSERVATIONS

Pac-12 still alive for Playoff slot

Dan Wolken
Columnist
USA TODAY

Of all the conference championship games, none has been as maligned as the one to decide the Pac-12 title.

For starters, it's played on a Friday night in an NFL stadium in Santa Clara, California, with kickoff in direct competition with rush-hour traffic to get human beings in seats. Second, it hasn't been a particularly high-stakes game in the College Football Playoff race. When Oregon got to the Playoff in 2014 and Washington did it in 2016, they punched their tickets in title game mismatches that quickly turned into coronations.

There's a chance this year's Pac-12 title game could be extremely consequential and a matchup worth watching.

It's looking more likely Utah is going to finish the regular season 11-1 after clearing its biggest hurdle Saturday at Washington in a 33-28 win. Meanwhile, after a shaky start in 2016, they punched their tickets in title game mismatches that quickly turned into coronations.

What does it mean? Maybe nothing, depending on what happens in the Southeastern Conference, if Alabama and LSU play a great game Saturday that puts both in position to make the Playoff.

But it appears Utah and Oregon are on a course to play each other for a Pac-12 title while both being ranked well inside the Top 10, with the winner having one loss. Traditionally, that's the résumé of a Playoff team. Will it be good enough? Who knows. It's undeniable, though, that everything has fallen into place for the conference to give itself a chance and to put on an extremely relevant title game.

Other observations from Week 10:

■ Memphis had a day to remember: From the break of dawn to sunset with a jam-packed Liberty Bowl, nobody won the weekend like Memphis. The Tigers capped it off with a 54-48 win over previously undefeated SMU and took control of the West division in the American Athletic Conference, which is a big accomplishment on its own. But in some ways, the game was a secondary story for the Tigers' program, which was highlighted for a national audience on ESPN's "College GameDay" like never before. Iconic Beale Street was packed for blocks with Memphis fans, making for a unique backdrop to GameDay, and the Tigers sold out a home game without help from a rival fan base like Tennessee or Mississippi for the first time in recent memory. Remember, it was only 10 years ago – Nov. 9, 2009 to be exact – that former coach Tommy West unleashed a rant shortly after getting fired about the school's lack of commitment to the program. "Put somethin' in it, or do away with it!" A decade later, the Tigers are on their way to a sixth straight bowl game at 8-1 and might be the driver's seat to represent the Group of Five conferences in a New Year's Six bowl game.

■ USC has some clarity on the future: Let's be real about the state of affairs at Southern California: This was always likely to be Clay Helton's last season as the coach. But two events this weekend further clarified the Trojans' future. On Friday, USC chose Cincinnati's Mike Bohn to be its next athletics director, a person with knowledge of the situation told USA TODAY Sports. The person spoke on the condition of anonymity because the school hadn't made the announcement, which is expected to happen Monday. The second big development was USC's 56-24 loss at home to Oregon, underscoring the desperate need for change in the football program. Bohn wasn't hired by new USC president Carol Folt to maintain status quo. He was hired to make big changes and to put forth a plan to bring the Trojans back to national prominence. It's been obvious for the last two years that USC is a mediocre program that doesn't have a prayer of competing with the best of the best, but Helton's massive extension after the 2017 season made it prohibitive to fire him. Now that USC is 5-4, things should start to move quickly.

Analysis: FSU had no choice

Wayne McGahee III
Tallahassee Democrat | USA TODAY Network

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. – Florida State had to make the call to move on from football coach Willie Taggart on Sunday despite a buyout worth just over $18 million.

Fans have stopped coming to games; morale is low inside the program, and the belief that he could get it turned around was non-existent.

College football is a business, and the program is losing money because of the product on the field. In the end, that money – and the money FSU would likely have lost in the future – outweighed Taggart's buyout.

It was a tough choice by the FSU administration, but ultimately the right one.

Now it leaves the Seminoles with plenty of time before the early signing period to get a hire on-board without worrying. Recruiting is effectively over in December now with the majority of the recruits signing early.

Interim coach Odell Haggins, the defensive line assistant, has made it clear he has no interest in being a head coach, so there's no need to worry about hurting his feelings by trying to hire someone else while he is coaching games.

After the last three seasons, FSU can't afford not to nail this hire. It has to be someone that the FSU fan base and players can believe in from the jump.

Taggart seemed like a good hire when FSU brought him in, but the Seminoles need to find someone with an established reputation as a winner to get people back buying in.
